ZOO'S GUIDE TO ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW, WATCH, BUY THIS WEEK!

A Brit of alright!

Seriously sexy singer Britney Spears is selling out Vegas every night. It doesn't take a genius to see why...

We applaud whoever is responsible for this year's I'm a Celebrity... line-up, because it's unquestionably the sexiest in years. But there's one glaring omission: a gorgeous girl who loves being on TV as much as making sweet music. Step forward Britney Spears.

The singing sensation, seen here enjoying a splash in the sea in Hawaii, featured in her umpteenth TV cameo on E4 comedy hit Jane The Virgin last week, but we wouldn't get too excited about it being a regular gig: the Toxic singer has just extended her residency in Las Vegas by another two years.

And that's probably a good thing, as we're likely to see a lot more of the blonde bombshell shaking her incredible curves at her Vegas show (below) than you ever will on a primetime TV show.

In fact, the singer's catsuit split on stage last month, so get yourselves to Sin City pronto and hope it's a case of Oops!... I Did It Again.

On TV...

...and in Vegas!

WHEN GAFFERS GO TO WAR!

With a third of the season gone, ZOO asked body language expert Judi James to cast her eye over a few managers on the warpath...

JURGEN KLOPP vs ALAN PARDEW

"Jurgen adopts a charging bull elephant mode, suggesting he has momentarily lost all sense of calm and maturity. His ego is engulfed by a desire to protect itself by throwing blame at his opponent, while his mouth shape looks like Munch's The Scream, hinting there's a desire to call for help to support all this underlying anger."

"Pardew shows a canny sense of survival by adopting a calm dad pose to make himself look like the bigger man while neatly winding up his opponents. The 'talk to the hand' look is a gesture of arrogant dismissal. However, while the right hand is in command and control mode, the left is signalling suppressed tension."

"Arrogant dismissal"

"On a higher intellectual plane"

MOURINHO vs REFS

"The Special One doesn't do losing, as his body language is quirky and detached. His war with refs takes him to a higher intellectual plane, mourning the loss of reason and fair play."

MOURINHO vs HIS PLAYERS

"His war with players brings out a hard stare and a state of aggression that would make a Silverback back down."

LOUIS VAN GAAL vs EX-PLAYERS

"Van Gaal's normal body language ranges from amiable bonhomie to a more meticulous and logical look. The war with Paul Scholes seems to have brought out the fight club mode in him though, with staring eyes and sucked-in lips at this press conference suggesting high levels of aggressive arousal he's barely managing to hide."

SAM ALLARDYCE vs HIS DEFENCE

"His mouth open and arms straight at his sides stance suggests he turns himself into a public address system or emergency service when enraged. The 'panto villain' face, with sucked-in lips and demonic eyebrows, shows a worrying level of frustration in terms of the pressure he is currently under. With his puffed chest and face, he looks as though he's about to reach boiling point."

"Reached boiling point"

→ Judi James is author of The Body Language Bible, out now

"Aggressive arousal"

ZOO's friend in high places!

Freerunner James Kingston scaled Wembley's arch earlier this year. Now he's taken on Paris' greatest landmark...

Earlier this year, professional freerunner James Kingston from Southampton became the first person to stand atop Wembley Stadium's famous arch, completely harness free.

ZOO was lucky enough to speak to the crackers 25-year-old afterwards (below) about the experience, and he told us that climbing "hundreds of feet off the ground gives you a real buzz".

Apparently, it clearly couldn't have been enough of a thrill, because five months on he's taken his hobby to daring new heights – specifically famous Parisian landmark the Eiffel Tower.

But this time, James' antics got him in a bit of hot water with the authorities. "When we climbed down, we were met by security who handcuffed us and took us to the local police station where we were held and questioned for six hours!"

The lengths some people go to for the perfect selfie, eh...

"I got a Luke Skywalker hand!"

This US Marine just strapped on the world's first prosthetic arm... controlled by his brain!

Grabbing a Red Bull!

US Marines Staff Sgt James Sides is one of many people to have served in Afghanistan. Unfortunately, he's also one of many to sustain an injury, in his case losing the use of his arm when an improvised explosive device (IED) went off underneath him.

Three years on, and Sides has become the world's first individual to receive a groundbreaking new prosthetic limb that can be controlled solely with the use of his brain and electrodes implanted in his arm.

"The joke is I got a Luke Skywalker hand!" exclaims a jovial Sides. "I can't do anything new, but it's the fluidity and the quality: grabbing my wallet to get money from the ATM, getting groceries, cooking, everything. It's truly amazing!"

At this point the technology, developed by the Alfred Mann Foundation in California, is not widely available, but with such incredible results like this for Staff Sgt Sides, ZOO really hopes that will change some day not too far, far away.

Taking cash out of the ATM!

“We’re a right couple of sh*tts!”

The final series of Peep Show is under way, so ZOO caught up with the El Dude Brothers to chat about their favourite scenes, returning in 10 years and the truth behind that barbecued dog...

Meeting the fans

Robert Webb I would have thought more people would come up to us to do the El Dude honk in our faces.

Luckily, we’ve escaped that!

David Mitchell That said, I’ve had so many people shout “Fk off, clean shirt” at me in the street.

RW Matt King, who plays Super Hans, has a great story when he was out with his family. Some bloke shouted, “Oi, oi, Scissor Hands”, and this guy’s mate next to him was so embarrassed he got his name wrong, he screamed, “It’s Super Hands, you silly ct” in the middle of a Christmas service.

Favourite scenes

RW Eating Mummy the dog. For the record, it was turkey I was eating. The art department even lovingly put hairs on it, just to make it extra realistic.

DM Mine would have to be when I ordered Jeremy to p*ss himself in the church. I was corpsing with every take. It’s not the flashiest special effect but my God, they say spaceships don’t make a noise when they blow up. P*ssing yourself really looks and sounds like that scene.

On-set fighting

RW I don't think in the 12 years we ever had any accidents, but this drunk homeless guy in Croydon kept giving us grief during filming one night. He started shouting and screaming at us and luckily our producer had just started doing Thai kickboxing and was there to protect us.

DM There was also a moment, which felt a bit "mafia" with one caterer...

RW This caterer fell out with our location manager and we told him "You should probably get your food from elsewhere".

DM The location manager was convinced it would be OK, at which precise point he pulled a shoelace out of his food...

Filming the final series

RW I got a bit emotional and cried when they took down the set for the last time. Matt King on the other hand had no shame – and took the bloody sofa!

DM I didn't cry, but that could be because I'm dead inside. I've always loved how the friendship is based on how much they despise each other and take a lot of comfort from looking at the other one and thinking: "Whatever's wrong with my life, I'm not as bad as him." Worryingly, they're not massively transformative performances...

RW Let's be honest: they're a real couple of sh*ts.

One more series?

DM I think now feels like a good point to stop Peep Show. It's a show about young men – and we're 40 now. One day we might go back and see what Mark and Jeremy are doing in their old age, though: Peep Show set in a retirement home.

RW I'd like to see them return, only not in Croydon but a half-built hotel in Majorca, with Super Hans running the kitchen. I'm also holding out for a swearsy Comic Relief special, where we spend it playing each other's characters.

Ferrari's red hot... tractor?

Farmers' fancy!

Farmers are often the scourge of the countryside, pootling along at 5mph without a care in the world, hauling a load of manure just to give you your hellish journey that extra dose of teeth-gnashing frustration.

So, legendary Ferrari designer Pininfarina has decided to give you something as sexy as Jorgie Porter in the I'm A Celebrity... jungle shower to look at while they're preventing you from getting to that all-important meeting, by overhauling this Czech-made Zetor tractor for the Agritechnica trade show in Hannover, Germany.

With its blacked-out windows and sharp styling, 0-60mph times will be somewhere between now and New Year, and you can guarantee they'll be the coolest ride on the block when Kanye puts his order in for the one blingmobile he doesn't have in his garage....

This'll look great outside my local Harvester

UK vs US lingerie wars!

Who needs Victoria's Secret runway seats when you can have cut-price QVC babes on your TV?

QVC!

Last week saw one incredible battle of the catwalks, as Victoria's Secret duked it out with, er, QVC for the title of hottest lingerie pics of... well, last week.

In the US, we had a bevy of outrageously hot supermodels and celebrities, including Kendall Jenner and Gigi Hadid, decked out in the skimpiest, most-elaborate and expensive lingerie ever devised for the annual Victoria's Secret show.

But then the UK fought back in the shape of a clip from freeview channel QVC, which unexpectedly went viral. Initially that doesn't sound like a fair match up, but the plucky Brits had a secret weapon up their bras in the shape of former PDC darts walk-on babe Sammi Marsh and her pals' amazing curves, fronting the sexiest shopping session ever committed to TV.

We've absolutely no idea whether the seriously boobey models helped QVC shift a few extra sets of underwear, but we'd wager a good chunk of cash there will be a hell of a lot more blokes tuning into the show the next time they're channel hopping with nothing to watch...

VICTORIA'S SECRET!

JUST CAUSE 3 – FIRST PLAY!*IF MICHAEL BAY MADE VIDEO GAMES...

The action adventure has gone all Hollywood for its latest offering

When we say Just Cause 3 is the equivalent of giving Michael Bay control of a video game, we're not just spouting some sensationalist rubbish. The developers have gone on record as saying its main influences are movies such as Transformers.

That might sound crazy, but from the moment you start the game and see what we saw – our hero Rico Rodriguez stood untethered atop a plane firing RPGs into local militia on the ground – it'll make complete and utter sense and give you a good idea what you're getting in to.

There is a plot

The first outing for the series in five years sees another explosive-laden adventure for anti-hero Rodriguez, who returns to his homeland of Medici, a small cluster of fictional Mediterranean islands that's roughly four times the size of GTA V. A dictator, known as General di Ravello, has assumed control and you must join the rebels to help overthrow him – by any means.

Game basics

The islands look very similar to Far Cry 4's free-roaming sandbox game, only a bit brighter given the setting. There are even several towns to liberate and outposts to destroy.

The key difference, though, is this feels more Hollywood. When we wanted to take down an enemy-controlled area it usually meant rolling into town in a crazy way (like hanging upside down from a helicopter), wildly firing our semi-automatics, and destroying everything in our path.

Get creative with C4

We nailed the fundamentals of the game reasonably quickly: running, gunning, skydiving, base-jumping and blowing everything to smithereens as we saw fit. It's ludicrously fun and easy to master, with the only exception being the slightly more fiddly grappling hook. While an absurd piece of equipment, it's unique to this game and is definitely worth practicing. Essentially it lets you tether together multiple targets – in our case attaching cars, cows and explosive barrels to enemy choppers, or turning bad guys into giant Catherine wheels with the use of a nearby building and some rocket-propelled C4. To call it barmy wouldn't be doing it justice, but it is a lot of fun.

GUNS, GUNS, GUNS!

THE GRAPPLING HOOK IS BACK!

EVERYTHING IS DESTRUCTIBLE!

A game like no other

A huge arsenal of guns and the massive open world makes Just Cause 3 sound like so many other games. However, it plays like something completely different, mainly because it lets you unleash carnage in such a bonkers way.

For that reason alone, we're in no doubt it's going to be an absolute winner.

→ Just Cause 3 is out on PS4, Xbox One and PC, 1 December

Massive Xbox update!

Xbox One owners might want to think about dusting off their old 360 games (or checking out cheap pre-owned ones), as the new update – out now – has brought backwards compatibility to the next-gen console. Here's our pick of the games worth reacquainting yourself with...

ASSASSIN'S CREED II

Before the series started rolling out (slightly glitchy) new editions every year, there was this second entry which is probably still the best of the bunch, even today.

BIOSHOCK

You've probably already completed the greatest game ever released on the Xbox 360 umpteen times, but who are we to judge? It's still worth another round.

SOUTH PARK: THE STICK OF TRUTH

This hilarious side-scrolling treat is much better than the shambolic first-person shooter released in 1998 and was one of the highest-rated 360 games ever released.

CONDEMNED: CRIMINAL ORIGINS

One of the very first launch games for the 360 in 2005, and 10 years on it still remains one of the most terrifying first-person experiences we've ever played.

MASS EFFECT

The finest gaming trilogy ever didn't really take off until the sequel was released, but this first entry is still an invaluable starting point for anyone who missed out.

MIRROR'S EDGE

A free-roaming parkour delight which could be completed in under an hour if you were seriously handy with a controller. Still, it's one of the best ever made and worth a fiver from any pre-owned shelf.

UPFRONT

Multi-storey car park!

Moaning about improperly parked cars seems rather insignificant here...

US PARKING NIGHTMARE #1!

America has only gone and done it. And by that, we mean trying to find a space at your local Lidl look insignificant and unequivocally British.

When we go out and have to find a space in a car park, us Brits have to contend with the real dangers of improperly positioned trolleys and those blokes who won't stop asking if you want a quick window wash for £10.

But over in Houston, Texas, they have to deal with massive sinkholes that swallow 15 cars in one fell swoop. Well, they do say everything's bigger in Texas...

US PARKING NIGHTMARE #2!

While this gator snapped up the last space...

Meanwhile, over in Meridian, Mississippi, they've got 700lb alligators named Godzilla to fight over the best slots with. And if these two events happened in just one week, imagine how much absurd behaviour could throw a spanner into the works in one month?

What's next? Maybe they'll start making our preposterous health and safety regulations look insignificant by, ooh, banning heading in football matches. Oh, hang on...

That'll teach me for losing my ticket...

World's first luxury topless SUV!

Topless trucking

The Range Rover Evoque goes au naturel with divisive drop-top option

We knew this would happen. We knew one day, a manufacturer would officially lose its mind and create something completely insane. That manufacturer is Range Rover, and the insanity is this: the convertible Evoque.

Set for release next year, it features a fabric roof that transforms it from Waitrose warrior to Californian cruiser in 21 seconds, and a jazzy new interior with the latest in-car technology.

"But it looks like one of those amphibious vehicles that does the River Thames tours," we hear you scream. And yes, you are correct. But its creators claim it's a serious piece of kit.

Engine choices will be limited to either a 178bhp 2.0-litre TD4 diesel or the spicy 237bhp turbocharged 2.0-litre

Si4 petrol unit, and customers will have to opt for the range-topping Dynamic and Dynamic HSE trim levels if they fancy sunning the forehead while tackling a mountain pass.

Inside, there's a new 10.2-inch touchscreen display and 3G internet connectivity, plus it still packs serious off-road chops, with proper four-wheel-drive and traction control that adapts to different surfaces.

You will be able to wade through water up to half-a-metre deep and tackle 45-degree gradients (and 35-degree tilts) with the roof firmly down. Not that anyone has requested this, ever.

However, nobody thought SUVs would catch on and look where we are now. In fact, let's just admit it. Despite its £47,500 price tag, it's going to sell like hot cakes. Groan.

ZOO DRIVES NEW INFINITI Q30

A swanky alternative to the Teutonic titans!

It's styled to stand out from the crowd, features an interior that's decked out in premium touches and boasts suspension that's softer and more relaxing than a memory foam mattress.

Infiniti hopes to pinch a few customers from the likes of Audi and Mercedes with its Q30 Premium Tech AWD DCT, a smart hatchback that can be specified with a punchy 2.2-litre, 168hp diesel engine and all-wheel-drive.

But underneath the futuristic exterior is actually some fairly old technology. In fact, it's mainly pinched from the previous generation Mercedes-Benz A-Class, meaning many buttons, electronics and levers are borrowed from the German marque.

It's a shame, because the Q30 is actually a comfortable cruiser, but it falls behind its German rivals in terms of interior tech, performance and price. At more than £30,000, it's not cheap.

So, if you really have to be different, it's well worth a look. Or, you could just be a sheep and buy German. You're bound to be happier...

Plug yourself into this week's hottest entertainment, featuring the best films, games, music and DVDs

Although the series was only ever going to end in one (rather predictable) way, Mockingjay – Part 2 still contains enough edge-of-your-seat action to please even the most regular cinemagoer, not to mention enough shocking deaths to satisfy a bloodthirsty George RR Martin!

The opening scene picks up immediately where the last film left off, but as the fight edges closer to the Capitol, Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) and the other rebels find themselves in a minefield of booby traps – and one rather intense sewage scene with some terrifying monsters that'll give you nightmares.

Like the previous entries, it's a little ponderous to begin with, but ultimately it's still a fitting and dramatic conclusion to The Hunger Games saga. ★★★★★ of the week!

Star Wars: Battlefront

When you boil it down, there's nothing that groundbreaking about Battlefront. It's another first-person shooter with a few vehicles and a smattering of more powerful characters. There's a campaign mode, but this is nothing more than a few training exercises, so all the focus is on the multiplayer.

However, in so perfectly realising such an iconic pre-existing universe – from the intricately designed alien worlds to the little pew-pews of blaster fire – EA has created something special. Factor in being able to jump into all the Star Wars vehicles you've ever dreamed of, plus the ability to control Vader, Luke, Han and other iconic characters, and it makes it impossible to put down.

Without question, this is the Star Wars game we've been looking for. ★★★★★

"IT'S INVIGORATING TO BE NAKED"

The soap stunner's in the jungle... and out of her clothes!

For the past 13 years, we've been treated to some seriously hot celebrity babes being dropped into a swelteringly hot jungle.

Thankfully, this year is no different, with the extraordinary Jorgie Porter arriving Down Under to join this year's I'm A Celebrity... Get Me out Of Here!

You'll know the Manchester mega-babe best as the feisty Theresa McQueen on Channel 4's totty-filled ➔

IT'S I'M A CELEBRITY'S...

AND SHE'S ONLY IN ZOO!

JORGIE

soap Hollyoaks. However, not for much longer: the sexy star is set to leave in 2016.

Firstly, though, she'll have to conquer a Bushtucker Trial or two... oh, and have to shower in her bikini under that infamous jungle waterfall. So, if like us, you're hoping her stay in the show is a lengthy one, here's how the TV hottie will hack it...

Nicely naked

Miss Porter loves nothing more than spending time in the buff – and she won't be afraid to peel off on the ITV show. "Yes I'll be packing some swimwear. I'll wear a one-piece, but the longer I stay in, the skimpier I'll go!"

The blonde bombshell adds, "I'm always starkers around my friends' houses. We went to a naturist sauna in Austria once – it's just so invigorating to be naked. You get given a towel, but it's way more exciting to take a risk and walk everywhere with nothing on."

We're hoping the jungle's as steamy as Jorgie's skiing break!

Facing her fears

Of course, the jungle is not without its challenges. And Jorgie admits it is "definitely the scariest thing I have ever done".

Unfortunately for the 27-year-old, a few of her greatest fears are about to be realised. ➔

A blonde woman with long, wavy hair is posing for a photograph. She is wearing a black leather motorcycle jacket that is open, revealing a black bikini top. She is also wearing black bikini bottoms. She is holding the edges of the jacket with both hands. The background is a plain, light color.

“The longer
I stay in, the skimpier
my bikini will go”

"I don't want to lose my bum in the jungle"

"I really don't like spiders," she tells ZOO. "I have to phone my mum to tell her to get rid of them! People ask if I'm scared of snakes or rats, but I've never come across them before."

Still, at least the bushtucker doesn't frighten her, telling us eating weird things doesn't bother her so much. Well, sort of. "If it makes me sick, then that will be scary too," she adds.

Bushtucker battles

Talking of tucker, the pint-sized babe loves her food – and her campmates better watch out if she doesn't get well fed.

"I think I will find lack of food hard," she admits. "I work long hours on Hollyoaks and if I don't get a chance to eat properly, I get 'hangry'!"

But while Jorgie is trying to keep her "hangry" side under wraps, it is her most famous asset that she fears a lack of decent tucker puts at risk.

"I don't want to lose my bum in the jungle! I do lots of squats at home so I will carry some rocks in the jungle to avoid this!"

So there you have it. Vote now to keep Jorgie in there – for the bikini showers and skimpy bum exercises at the very least. Gorgeous Jorgie's definitely got our vote to be 2015's Queen Of The Jungle!

GREETINGS FROM NORTH KOREA'S

Our man takes a trip to the world's most heavily guarded demilitarized zone for the weirdest holiday of a lifetime...

Walk around South Korea's capital city of Seoul and you'd be forgiven for forgetting that the country is still at war with its neighbours to the north.

There are more skyscrapers than London, robotised public toilets automatically clean your ar*e, and in the province of Gangnam – made famous by hyperactive pop star PSY – there's a Maserati at every turn, just like Milan.

But head a few miles north, to the most heavily guarded demilitarized zone (DMZ) in the world, and the picture is very different. Most residents of South Korea aren't allowed anywhere near the 20km civilian safety zone, let alone experience the actual Military Demarcation Line.

Yet, for some reason, ZOO has decided to take a trip to Panmunjom, the most forward position along the DMZ and one of the most hostile places in the world; an eerily silent spot where soldiers from the North and military personnel from the South stand face-to-face, and where a misread hand signal could kick-start World War III. Gulp.

A VERY BRIEF HISTORY LESSON

Rewind back to the end of World War II and Communist Russia was busy installing a leader in the north of Korea, which had declared independence from Japan. Unfortunately, the United States was busy appointing a democracy in the south, which eventually led to the Korean War, which raged from 1950 to 1953 and claimed an estimated five million lives.

The feuding came to an abrupt end in 1953, when the two sides signed an armistice agreement that stated the countries would lay down their weapons. It was not the end of a war – merely a truce that currently hangs precariously in the balance.

A COACH TRIP TO A WARZONE

Back to the present day and we're being bundled onto a bus where the US Army's Private Ocampo silences the chatter with a set of clearly barked instructions.

"You will soon be face-to-face with North Korea. You will not gesture, you will not point and you will not walk anywhere you are not authorised to. Failure to do so will have extremely serious consequences. Are we clear?"

The bus shakily agrees and the serious-looking soldier begins checking everyone's ID and ticking names off a list.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF BORDER CONFLICT IN KOREA

July 1953

The Korean War ends when a ceasefire agreement is signed. The DMZ is set up.

October 1966

The peace doesn't last long as both militaries invade the DMZ and fights break out.

January 1968

North Korean commandos attempt to assassinate South Korean President Park Chung-hee, but are stopped.

June 1999

North Korea takes to the sea and the Battle of Yeonpyeong breaks out. At least 20 North Korean military personnel are killed.

March 2010

A South Korean naval vessel sinks, killing 46 personnel. South Korean investigators claim the cause was a North Korean torpedo.

August 2015

The two countries begin playing audio propaganda over high-powered speakers in the DMZ. Fire is exchanged, talks are held and tensions are reduced.

IN THE ZONE!

We are told the trip "entails entry into a hostile area and possibility of injury or death as a direct result of enemy action".

Ocampo is decked out in opaque shades, which we're later told are standard issue, so the enemy can't see your eyes.

The tour is due to end in Panmunjom, which is referred to as the Joint Security Area (or JSA in military speak), and sits at the most advanced point in South Korea along the Military Demarcation Line. Up until 2007, it was the only connection between the North and South and houses official buildings from both warring sides. This tour takes us deep into "Conference Row", where representatives from both sides sometimes meet to hold talks.

ON GUARD!

TUNNEL WARFARE

First, we are shown a number of tunnels dug by North Korean soldiers in order to spring surprise attacks on the south. The third tunnel, which was discovered in 1978, is now open to visitors, who can walk its entire 1.1-mile length towards enemy lines.

The tunnel was allegedly designed by North Korea to launch a large-scale attack on the South and can accommodate 30,000 armed men per hour. It is just one of many tunnels that have threatened the 1953 armistice agreement and a poignant – not to mention stiflingly claustrophobic – place to visit.

Shortly afterwards, we are escorted towards the border, where we are warned we will likely come face-to-face with military personnel from the other side.

They have been known to take photographs of visitors, which are then used as part of a large-scale propaganda exercise to warn residents of the North against defecting.

A MILITARY FACE-OFF

The JSA is hushed and we are flanked by a bunch of burly Republic of Korea soldiers. They stand in a TeukGong MooSool pose – an ancient martial art favoured by the military here – and face the opposition for hours on end each day.

We can clearly see North Korean soldiers and generals in the distance, but are reminded not to point or gesture. Of course, we fire off a few snaps on the smartphone when no one is looking.

"It's a strange place to be stationed," explains Ocampo. "It's beautiful but dangerous at the same time. Just a few weeks ago, a landmine that had been buried where our Republic of Korea soldiers regularly patrol blew up two guys. We were placed on high alert. I thought we were going to war."

THE OTHER SIDE!

Not that a war would last very long. Ocampo claims that if North Korea did decide to invade, his guys would only last around 15 minutes before being overrun.

But for now, things seem to be stable and a select few tourists are permitted to experience the area. Although, to be honest, a trip to Center Parc would probably be slightly more relaxing.

There's not much Jess Impiazzi hasn't done on our TV screens, from gracing TOWIE as a Sugar Hut Honey to ruding it up in Marbella in Ex On The Beach's sensational second series, where her memorable on-screen antics (sex, drinking, hangovers and rows) earned her a place in ZOO's heart.

THE

HI, JESS. IS IT FUN BEING ONE OF THE HOTTEST BABES ON BRITISH TV?

It's ace, but it does have its downsides. I love shooting for ZOO as we always have loads of fun, but I've not been able to do it as much recently because I've been doing my television stuff.

WHAT MAKES THE IDEAL TELEVISION TOTTY?

I love dark hair and bright eyes, like Megan Fox. Then I think Eva Longoria's Hispanic look is stunning. Actually, come to think of it, I'd actually turn lesbian for those two – I'm obsessed!

AND WHAT ABOUT BRITISH BEAUTIES?

Hannah Elizabeth is my bestie from when we were both Sugar Hut Honeys. She was amazing on Love Island. I really miss the Sugar Hut, so we need to have a big reunion. It would be great to see everyone.

WE'D CERTAINLY COME! WHEN WILL YOU NEXT BE POPPING UP ON OUR SCREENS?

I've just done a little indie film called Retribution. It should be out soon, but editing has been a bit slow. It's my first little foot in the door. I absolutely loved it and it was the best day of my life – even if I did only have about 20 lines.

CAN WE EXPECT MORE APPEARANCES ON THE SILVER SCREEN FROM YOU IN THE FUTURE?

Hopefully! Before I started modelling I really, really wanted to be an actor. I'm desperate to do a horror film – that would definitely be my dream job.

AND IF YOU COULD RECREATE ONE ICONIC ON-SCREEN MOMENT...

That's easy! I'm obsessed with Only Fools And Horses and my favourite moment was when Del Boy says, "Play it nice and cool, son. Nice and cool..." and then falls through the bar. They don't make comedy like that any more. I'm always falling over things so it shouldn't be too hard for me to recreate...

Welcome

THEY'RE WATCHING YOU!

You've seen SPECTRE's all-seeing spy network of the future, but did you know the British Government is doing it for real?

The British Government is seemingly looking to the silver screen for inspiration as it increases its spying and surveillance powers over the United Kingdom. As James Bond pulls out all the stops to bring down the evil organisation SPECTRE (below), which uses a grid that oversees absolutely everything across the globe, here's what those in power can see...

THEY'RE TRAWLING... YOUR INTERNET HISTORY!

If proposed new laws are passed, the Government can check on which websites you've been checking out, by ensuring internet service providers save each customer's history for one year. Formerly, you could have hidden your activity inside the dark web – a way of hiding your browsing habits – but now they've worked out a method of even bypassing that and are monitoring "internet connection records", which display exactly what sites your machine has arrived at. Luckily they can't quite work out whether you've been watching cute cat videos or worse. Yet...

SNOOP RATING 3/5

THEY'RE VIEWING... YOUR MOBILE CAMERA!

Hackers aren't just kids in their parents' basement – they also work at one of the most high-tech facilities in the country, the Government's Communication Headquarters (GCHQ). The spies who work at the secret facility in Cheltenham used to require a warrant before they went on a hacking expedition but, thanks to these new laws, the computer wizards can "interfere" with your computers and mobile phones without your permission. They can listen in on calls, copy data and even turn on your cameras and microphones to have an eavesdrop.

SNOOP RATING 5/5

THEY KNOW... WHERE YOU'VE BEEN!

The usual method of tracking your movements would be by triangulating your mobile phone signal – unless, of course, your Jason Bourne-esque training teaches you to flush your burner pay-as-you-go handset down the toilet. But now, thanks to the digital age and the huge advantages of contactless technology, it's a whole load easier to track you down. Your bank card, Apple Pay or Oyster Card logs your exact location every time it's used, effectively leaving a digital paper trail of your whereabouts for anyone looking to find you.

SNOOP RATING 2/5

THEY'RE READING... YOUR SOCIAL MEDIA!

Back in June, the Government announced it would be enlisting the services of seven outside organisations to monitor Facebook, Twitter and blogs. Their key objectives are to search for keywords, track and inform them of spikes in unusual hashtags or topics, and to discover significant online individuals (known as "authors") who are influential enough to affect public opinion or even entice anti-social behaviour. Fortunately, this is quite easy to counter: just keep your accounts private and they won't be able to see your online ramblings.

SNOOP RATING 3/5

THEY'RE WATCHING... YOU FROM THE SKIES!

Not content with watching you at every opportunity with a comprehensive CCTV network (with one for every 11 people, there are more cameras in the UK per capita than anywhere else in the world), the police are now launching drones to spy from higher up. London's airport police have announced plans to launch mini drones into UK airspace in the hope they can track wanted assailants seven times faster than regular ground units. Thankfully, they won't be armed with Hellfire missiles like their US Army counterpart, the MQ-9 Reaper drone.

ARE THERE ROSE-TINTED GLASSES WHEN IT COMES TO THINKING ABOUT THE OLD DAYS, OR WAS IT ALWAYS BEAUTIFUL FOOTBALL UNDER SIR ALEX?

It's how people remember things. Your childhood was always great. It's easy to do that and everyone is guilty of it, players as well. There is always pressure here, every time you put on the shirt. People always look to judge you, and there is nothing wrong with that.

ANTHONY MARTIAL
THE REAL DEAL?

It's a big step to come to this club and play. For a young lad to come over and start like he has is incredible really. The signs are very positive, but we have to be careful not to expect too much because he is going to have ups and downs.

CAN YOU PROVE THE CRITICS WRONG AND WIN SILVERWARE THIS SEASON?

The only competition

we're out of is the League Cup. This team is developing: we'll be there when it counts in May.

HOW IS BATTLING MORGAN SCHNEIDERLIN AND BASTIAN SCHWEINSTEIGER FOR A MIDFIELD SLOT?

It's frustrating when you aren't playing, but you have to understand the bigger picture and realise sometimes you can't play. The lads who have stayed here a long time in the past did it with rotation. I want to do whatever I can to help the team.

"I've got the power at 12st!"

The four-time world title challenger tells ZOO why this time he'll be coming home with the belt

HI, MARTIN. WITH YOUR FOURTH WORLD TITLE SHOT THIS SATURDAY, WILL THIS BE FOURTH TIME LUCKY?

Back to Germany where it all began against Felix Sturm. It's the fight I targeted when I moved to super middleweight. Arthur Abraham is a great champion and a tough man to beat on his home patch, but my trainer Oliver Harrison and I both believe we have the formula to take his title.

DOES IT HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH THE CLINIC CARL FROCH PUT ON AGAINST HIM IN 2010?

The way Froch and Andre Ward both beat him was class and we're also planning to beat him like that. I know Abraham's got a good jab, I know he's very strong, I know he's lazy and I know he's open to the body. I have to go in there and make him worried about what I can do.

AFTER 11 ROUNDS WITH GENNADY GOLOVKIN, IS ABRAHAM'S POWER A NON-ISSUE FOR YOU?

Golovkin's a lot more relentless so I've experienced that type of power at a higher pace, but I'm still wary of Abraham. I'd be stupid if I wasn't worried about it because he hits very hard. I need to be switched on for all 12 rounds to beat him.

HAVING SHARED A RING WITH GREAT CHAMPIONS LIKE GOLOVKIN, SERGIO MARTINEZ AND FELIX STURM, WHERE WOULD YOU RANK ABRAHAM IN THAT LIST?

I haven't fought him yet so it's hard to say, but going off his sheer physical stature and strength, he's got to be my second toughest opponent behind Golovkin. He's going to be a lot harder to move than Sergio Martinez and Felix Sturm. Funnily though, it's the fight I've got most chance of winning because I'm at my natural weight. YOU'VE SCORED A FEW KNOCKOUTS YOURSELF AT SUPER MIDDLEWEIGHT. ARE YOU STRONGER AT THIS WEIGHT?

It's a weight I should have been at a couple of years ago, but my opportunities were at middleweight so I stayed there. Looking back I don't know how I did it because it was wrecking my life. The power is there. I always had the power when I was more than 12st, but as soon as I got

"My balls are still ringing from the first fight!"

Million Dollar Crolla readies himself for his second crack of the whip...

HI, ANTHONY. YOU GET A SECOND CHANCE TO WIN THE WBA LIGHTWEIGHT WORLD TITLE ON SATURDAY. HOW UPSET ARE YOU IT'S NOT YOUR FIRST TITLE DEFENCE?

It was gutting to have it taken away by the judges the last time but whingeing won't make me world champion. I'm thankful to get a second chance.

HAVING SHARED THE RING WITH HIM FOR 12 ROUNDS, WHAT DO YOU MAKE OF DARLEYS PEREZ?

He's clever how he tried to steal the rounds by working hard in the last 30 seconds. But it was nothing more than I expected. He's a good fighter but I proved I can hold my own with him.

HIS AIM WASN'T THE MOST ACCURATE. HAVE YOU GOT REINFORCED CUP-PROTECTORS FOR HIM THIS TIME?

Ha ha. My balls are still ringing from the last fight! If it's going to be a dogfight then I'm ready for that. But I think the referee will be picking up early on it this time because I got hit low throughout the first fight.

WHAT MORE CAN YOU DO TO GET THE WIN?

I've got to be careful not to go in there thinking I've got to knock him out and take it out of the judges' hands. I went into the first fight believing I could win. Now I know I can beat him so I'll box to orders again.

YOUR TRAINER JOE GALLAGHER HAS MASTERMINDED BIG WINS OF LATE. WHAT'S THE GYM ATMOSPHERE LIKE?

In boxing you're on your own once that bell goes, but the team spirit in the gym is brilliant. I was in Callum Smith's corner for his fight against Rocky Fielding and it just makes you think "my turn next", so I can't wait.

down to 11st 6lb it disappeared.

WILL YOU BE NEEDING A KNOCKOUT AFTER THE JUDGES STOPPED YOU WINNING THE TITLE ON YOUR LAST TRIP TO GERMANY?

I wouldn't be taking the fight if I thought I had to knock out Abraham to win as he's shown that's virtually impossible. I do believe

I can beat him convincingly enough on points and get a fair shot at this one, being a more established fighter now.

IBF CHAMPION JAMES DEGALE HAS MENTIONED YOUR NAME A FEW TIMES. HOW MUCH OF A CARROT IS A UNIFICATION FIGHT WITH HIM?

I'm not looking past the Abraham fight because that's my be all and end all, but I've heard James DeGale mention me a couple of times and it's because he wants that big domestic fight like I do. It's up to me to make it a unification fight by getting past Abraham.

WHY COTTO vs CANELO WILL BE THE BIGGEST WAR EVER!

With 623 rounds, 85 victories and 65 KOs between them, ZOO looks at why Miguel Cotto and Saul Alvarez's middleweight title clash will go down in history this weekend...

Mexican-Puerto Rican rivalry

Mexican and Puerto Rican fighters have been producing some of the best ring wars since 1934, when bantamweight Sixto Escobar dethroned legendary Mexican Rodolfo "Baby" Casanova to become Puerto Rico's first world champion. More than 270 world champions between them later, and Mexico is still rankled by the smaller Latino nation. Cotto has already claimed, "I'm going to get this victory for all Puerto Ricans around the world."

Evenly matched action heroes

Both fighters are throwbacks: heavy-handed boxer-punchers who have no qualms in throwing the rule book out of the window and walking into a fire fight. Having faced both, even Floyd Mayweather Jr can't split them: "Canelo vs Cotto is an intriguing match up. Cotto took more chances with me, but he took more punishment. Canelo is a very smart boxer, though. I don't know who I would put money on."

The age factor

Sometimes when fighters are so

PICS: Getty Images, PA Photos

evenly matched, it helps to have a variable to split them. Try a 10-year age gap. Experience and guile vs youth and strength. Or, 35-year-old Miguel Cotto could turn old overnight and wind up on the receiving end of a beating by a young, fresh 25-year-old upstart. Either way, the fight has a big "what if...?"

Cotto reborn

Since hooking up with storied trainer Freddie Roach, Cotto has been a man possessed, moving up to middleweight and stopping everything in his way. He now even refers to himself in the third person. "The biggest tool I have on my side is Freddie Roach. They know what Freddie Roach means in boxing. They know what Freddie Roach is capable of doing with Miguel Cotto," he said of the pairing.

Brutal Canelo

After his solitary loss to Floyd Mayweather Jr, a mega-fight which many thought came too soon, Canelo has also become a new fighter – more brutal, more clinical. According to the Mexican star, this super-fight has come at just the right time. "The boxing world needs a fight like this and I'm not afraid to take risks. I am a complete fighter, more mature, and I believe my fighting style and opponents over the years have shown that," he said.

"Chipotle, Guinness and massages!"

Mr Money In The Bank talks us through life on the road as a WWE superstar...

Morning workout

"We'll fly into the city where we're performing in the morning and the first thing we do is look for the best place to eat and work out. I'll do some protein powder and a couple of Quest bars, and then a big session in the gym."

Three lunches

"We eat a lot of repetition foods because of the high calorie intake and being on the road. I'll have powdered greens, chia seeds and nuts mixed with Greek yoghurt and banana for brunch, then three Chipotle naked burrito meals with rice and grilled chicken or steak throughout the day."

Showtime

"How long we spend at the arena depends on the show. If it's Raw, we can be there all day to get stuff done like backstage interviews, promos, and media stuff for overseas, especially if a marquee event is coming up. Then I really need to get involved, as the current holder of the Money In The Bank contract!"

Hotel recuperation

"Chuckling out time is usually 11pm, then it's back on the road. We'll catch a chartered flight or drive two or three hours to the next city. I usually hit the sack as soon as I get to the hotel because my body's sore after the match, then you get up the next morning and do it all again. After a massage, that is..."

Injury holiday

"The only time you get a break is if you're injured. I went sailing through a ladder and totally messed up my neck and shoulder in the Money In The Bank All-Stars Ladder Match in Philadelphia in 2013. They put six anchors in it to fix it. I was out for six months and spent the whole time drinking Guinness and getting fat – it was a nice holiday!"

Wenger vs his coat: game on!

As winter sets in, the Premier League's oldest rivalry is reignited. Here is the tale of the tape between Arsene Wenger and his toughest-ever opponent...

FULHAM vs ARSENAL

2 January 2012

With a cold breeze drifting in off the Thames into Craven Cottage, Wenger went to put his hands in his pockets. But one pocket wasn't playing ball. After some scrambling around, Arsene elected to take his seat on the bench instead.

ARSENAL vs NORWICH

That pesky zip came back to haunt the Frenchman. This time, it was stuck at the bottom of his jacket but after a few forceful tugs, it was swiftly shown who's Le Boss.

ARSENAL vs HULL

4 January 2015

It's the decider: Wenger didn't even get out of the starting blocks with the zip, and was left to face the cold with an open jacket.

WENGER 1-3 COAT

SHEFFIELD WEDNESDAY vs ARSENAL

27 October 2015

Having reached the stage of all-out war, the coat wouldn't even let Wenger put it on. The Frenchman wasn't taking no for an answer, and used so much brute force, the hood flopped on. #Thuglife

SAM BURGESS

SCAPEGOAT OR QUITTER?

After the code-switching centre fled England's Rugby World Cup fallout, the experts speak out on Burgess-gate

England rugby star Sam Burgess has re-signed for the NRL's South Sydney Rabbitohs, less than a year after he embarked on his ill-fated rugby union adventure. He leaves behind a wave of criticism and anger, not to mention his head coach at Bath, Mike Ford, claiming he "didn't have the stomach" to fight for his future in union.

So was the switch a costly catastrophe or a convenient excuse for England's World Cup washout? World Cup winners, rugby league legends and former teammates have their say...

Scapegoat

"For me Sam Burgess is not a quitter. He likes a challenge, and that was the whole reason for switching to rugby union. So something else has gone on – whether that is the treatment, I'm sure we will find out very soon."

JASON ROBINSON

Scapegoat

"I said last week that Sam Burgess is not to blame for this mess and I stand by it. But with his return to rugby league, we've reached one of the all-time lows and most embarrassing points in English rugby history."

SIR CLIVE WOODWARD

Scapegoat

"The Sam Burgess affair makes me feel sorry and furious. Sorry for Burgess and steaming with anger at whoever thought it would be a good idea to persuade him he could be a World Cup-standard centre eight months after switching over from rugby league. The people who forced the move through should be held to account."

MATT DAWSON

Scapegoat

"It's easy to criticise, especially in this age now where everyone's on social media and has an opinion. To play in a World Cup after just 12 months in the game is remarkable. He'll be a huge loss to rugby union, but I'm a rugby league supporter as well and it'll be great to see him back in the game."

KEVIN SINFIELD

Quitter

"I'm massively disappointed. I thought he was a guy who was going to have a go and stick it out. He played in the World Cup and I thought he was going to come back to Bath, get his head down, play in the back row here and become a world-class player. It doesn't come overnight. It's just whether you want to do it or not."
